Certified Consulting Practitioner ▾

Applicant name

The Certified Consulting Practitioner programme is an early career level certification programme suitable to candidates coming from a broad range of educational backgrounds who are working or have had experience in a consulting practice in the engineering and infrastructure industry.

The qualification validates the Certified Consulting Practitioner's skills to work in a professional capacity within a consulting practice in the engineering and infrastructure industry, demonstrating their understanding of commercial and operational issues, management of risks, marketing and business development, human resources including health, safety and welfare and financial management, and FIDIC's three key values of Quality, Integrity, and Sustainability.

*Please note that FCL does not provide training. FCL provides certification to already qualified individuals who have experience and practical industry knowledge in their area of specialisation.
